BIKE RIDE WITH THE RABBI
SATURDAY, JULY 18
8:30AM

Spend Shabbat morning cycling on the beautiful roads of Westchester with Rabbi Goldsmith.

We will meet in the temple parking lot and ride up to Armonk for some coffee and muffins. We will then loop back down via Glenville before finishing up at the temple.

The ride will be about 20 miles on moderately hilly terrain - best for experienced cyclists or people in good shape. Please feel free to invite friends along for the ride.

Please RSVP to Abbie Levitt at 914-967-4382 x11 so we don’t leave without you, or just make sure to show up by our start time.

Looking forward to riding with you!

Have a FANTASTIC Summer

Take a stroll with us through the last year — a year of exciting events for congregants of all ages, projects we worked on together, holidays we celebrated, and strong bonds built within our community. 5775 was a GREAT year! See more pictures on page 11.
GARDEN OF GRATITUDE

A new area of our synagogue is blooming!

Just to the left of the sanctuary, between the building and the forest, we are planting a Garden of Gratitude for the benefit of all members and visitors to the congregation.

The Garden of Gratitude is thanks to the vision of Joy Klebanoff together with her children Jennifer Lerner and Peter Klebanoff. Seeking a fitting tribute to the memory of Joy’s late husband, Steven, they helped Rabbi Goldsmith conceive of a space where congregants could gather outside to reflect and learn, or simply to schmooze and visit.

The Klebanoffs have named one of the beautiful benches that will grace this garden in memory of Steven. The benches, the grassy area, the flowering bushes and the beauty of the forest just beyond will help to make our temple an even more gracious, attractive and welcoming place to be.

FAREWELL DENISE!

For the last three years we have had the pleasure of working with Denise Burke.

We are sad to say goodbye as she and her family relocate to Austin, TX.

Hired as the Religious Educator’s assistant, Denise has worn many hats including B’nei Mitzvah Boot Camp coordinator, webmaster, and editor of our weekly EmanuMail. With her professionalism, diligence and a good sense of humor, Denise has brought us not only timely communication and organization, but the blessings of friendship, camaraderie and thoughtfulness that have helped to make our school and our congregation a warmer, friendlier and more engaging place to be.

While we hate to see Denise go, we are so happy for the opportunities that her family will have in the Lone Star State and we celebrate the time that she spent with us at Emanu-El!

THANK YOU TO OUR COMMITTEES!

A big thank you to all the volunteers who help make our congregation a great place to be!

Interested in getting involved? Please contact Abbie Levitt or Rabbi Goldsmith.
Jennifer, Lev, Talia and I head to Israel on June 25th. We’re going for a wedding, we’re going to see friends, we’re going to introduce our children to a land that we love. After living there for a year during rabbinical school, Jennifer and I feel a special bond with the Land of Israel and its people. It is a land that echoes with history: every stone has a story to tell, the olive trees have seen a thousand years of crusaders and mystics, people from the east and from the west. The people are vibrant, loud, pushy, innovative, funny, loving, passionate, and not a little crazy — so they’re like the family you never knew you had.

As we head to Israel with our children, we’re also celebrating. We’re celebrating the victory of the liberal Jewish movements in the recent World Zionist Organization elections that we told you about all year long. The Reform movement, under the ARZA banner, won 56 of the seats in that election. Combined with the 25 seats of the Conservative movement, the liberal branches of Judaism have a solid majority in the 145 seat U.S. Delegation. That means that our pluralistic, egalitarian voice will directly impact the Jewish Agency for Israel, the Jewish National Fund and many other state institutions. This will lead to a more open Israel, more commitment to freedom and equality and justice for all of Israel’s citizens. When we get off the plane in Tel Aviv, we will be proud to know that so many of you helped to make this possible through your votes.

In addition to visiting friends, eating out and playing at the beach, we’re going to do some things with a bit more depth as well. For one, we’ll be participating in an archaeological dig at Beit Guvrin. These caves were dug by our ancestors over 1700 years ago and later filled with possessions and detritus. Tourists are welcome to come to dig for a day under the guidance of a professional archeologist, an experience we had on our Family Trip to Israel a few years ago. We’re excited to have our children help with the dig. To see the next generation touch the handiwork of long-ago ancestors, to see them uncover their own history and imagine what life might have been like in that long-ago time, to see them smiling and dirt covered, to see these things will be a blessing that reaches across centuries.

Israelis wrestle with the difficult times of today. And, through the World Zionist Organization, we too have impacted the issues that help define the character of the modern Jewish State. Israelis wrestle with uncovering our collective past, understanding where we come from, the history of our people in that land, and how that helps us to understand ourselves. And, through our Holy Days and Festivals, our sacred texts and our prayers, we too seek to understand how our past impacts our present, how the stories of our ancestors shape our own, how the debates and ideas recorded in our ancient texts remind us of what’s important in our own lives.

Lev and Talia are, perhaps, too young to delve into these issues on an intellectual basis. But as we walk the land we’ll see men with long beards and women whose heads are covered. We’ll see Arab cities within Israel and the barrier which separates Israel from the West Bank. When we visit the Western Wall, Jen and Talia will not be able to approach its ancient stones together with Lev and me. We’ll see shiny towers of Tel Aviv and poor areas of Jaffa. And we’ll dig at Beit Guvrin and uncover our connections with our ancient past. We’ll see shiny towers of Tel Aviv and poor areas of Jaffa. And we’ll dig at Beit Guvrin and uncover our connections with our ancient past. So, they may not be able to engage intellectually, but they will live and breathe and experience the myriad things that make being in Israel — that make being a Jew — so exciting and fulfilling and complicated and interesting.

As this programming year at the synagogue comes to an end, I’m struck by all of the ways that we’ve engaged in these same questions together over the year. With meaningful worship, interesting lectures, engaging discussions, and fun cultural programs we’ve experienced Judaism in community. And with joyous b’nei mitzvah, celebratory weddings, moving funerals, a beautiful Confirmation ceremony and inspiring baby namings we’ve marked the moments of our lives with friends and family. Without leaving the continent, we’ve lived our Jewish lives as individuals and in community, we’ve immersed in the Jewish past and wrestled with the Jewish future. May we continue to experience the manifold blessings of our heritage as we look together towards a warm summer and the year 5776 that lies just around the corner.

(P.S. The ice cream in Israel is really good, too! We’ll be sure to eat a lot of that!)

“Justice, Justice, Justice, You will pursue…”
- Deuteronomy 16:20.

In the Torah we are commanded to pursue justice and the Reform movement gave me two opportunities to engage in lobbying activities that informed our elected representatives in Washington, D.C. and in Albany on how justice should be pursued.

Every year I take our students to Washington to participate in a Political Action Seminar sponsored by the Religious Action Center of Reform Judaism (RAC). They are asked about their own efforts to perform mitzvot that help to make the world a better place and then told that though those efforts are vital they must also work to bring about systemic change that will alleviate the conditions causing so much of the injustice in our world.

That is the essence of lobbying – letting your elected officials know what policy and legislative changes are needed to bring tzedek – justice – to all of us.

On Tuesday, April 28, as part of a delegation of lay people organized by the RAC, I lobbied in Senator Chris Murphy’s and Congresswoman Elizabeth Esty’s offices asking them to support the compromise legislation on the Comprehensive Agreement to prevent Iran from obtaining a nuclear weapon. I guess that I was successful as it passed in the Senate by a vote of 99-1!

I understand the excitement that my students feel when those legislative assistants listen to my passionate concerns, relay them to my representatives and hopefully act appropriately on them.

On Monday, May 4, as part of Reform Jewish Voice in New York, I lobbied in the offices of State Senator Liz Krueger and State Assemblywoman Rebecca Seawright on two different issues: Immigration Reform and a resolution appointing a monitor to oversee the East Ramapo School District. School Board members from the ultra-Orthodox Jewish community who do not use the schools are severely cutting programs from the schools and diverting funds to their parochial schools. As an educator and former public school board member, I am very passionate about this issue and was able to educate Assemblywoman Seawright’s legislative assistant on its merits.

How do we pursue justice?

As a college student I demonstrated against the Vietnam War and for equal rights. I believed then, and as a “cockeyed optimist” still believe now, in the power and potential of our democracy. I feel compelled to do all that I can to insure that the system works for all us. I still vote in every election, work to help get those candidates that I support elected and then continue to fight for the policies that I deem vital to achieving justice and fairness in our country.

I am proud to be Jewish because we are commanded by our Torah to pursue tzedek – justice – and are taught by our Prophets that this is the essence of what it means to love God.

You love books? We love books! After all, we’re the people of the book!

Find out what All the Light We Cannot See, A Tale of Two Cities, and Oh, the Places You’ll Go have in common with Jewish tradition. At our Selected Shorts service we’ll use excerpts from these books and others to illuminate the meanings of our prayers and as added inspiration for our worship.

Bring your week to a peaceful close as literature meets liturgy and the universal themes of great books echo through our Jewish prayers. Who knows, you may even find some inspiration and ideas for your summer reading list!
